

ABSTRACT

5 A computer implemented method for operating a health-care service comprises receiving and analyzing health-care wishes of potential consumer, securing an initial commitment from potential consumer in order to search for and record health-care service data from plurality of medical providers, hospital providers, presenting suitable health-care data to consumer for consumer to analyze, placing consumer in direct negotiating contact with convenient provider in order for consumer to contract with suitable provider after consumer is advised of series of points of reference for various providers.